

RADIO STATION - WNTI.ORG

WNTI.org is the student-run internet radio station at Centenary University, providing music, news, sports and entertainment to listeners around the world.

WNTI.org, which is part of the Department of Communication and Fine Arts, provides a quality learning experience for Centenary students and alumni in collaboration with faculty and the greater Hackettstown community. The station's mission is to reflect the events, activities and academic life at Centenary and the surrounding region. WNTI invites students to participate in a modern, multimedia radio outlet that incorporates print, video, photography, art and design on an interactive website administered by students with professional supervision.

WNTI features a variety of musical genres popular with Centenary students and listeners worldwide. Those who listen will hear everything from rock to reggae and country to classical. Student DJs bring their research and knowledge to listeners, as well as live studio performers and special guests. The news department covers Centenary issues and events, while the sports department highlights the University's athletic teams. WNTI collaborates with academic departments and student organizations across campus, and serves as a media hub for sharing news about student and community activities. As a leading college radio station in northern New Jersey, WNTI offers internships and work-study opportunities for students preparing for media-related careers.
