

No one wants to imagine having a beloved pet go missing, but the reality is that gates can be left open and collars can slip off.

Scan me home

Microchipping is the easiest thing you can do to increase the odds of a safe return if your pet does get lost. With a quick scan, shelters and many vet offices can pull up your contact info.

Quick and convenient

Microchips are about the size of a grain of rice and are placed under the skin, between the shoulder blades. It takes just minutes at your vet's office and doesn't require surgery or anesthesia.

Be prepared

Nationwide® is the smart choice for pet owners who want to manage vet bills the easy way.
