Centenary University Inaugurates Bruce Murphy, Ed.D., as 14th President

Event held on Thursday, Jan. 28, may be the first virtual inauguration of a university president.

Centenary University formally inaugurated Bruce Murphy, Ed.D., as its 14th president during a virtual ceremony on Thursday, Jan. 28. The event may be the first virtual inauguration of a university president in the United States, and perhaps in the world. The virtual inauguration went live on Thursday, Jan. 28, at 11 a.m. via this link.

The ceremony featured an inaugural address from Dr. Murphy, as well as presentations from a host of dignitaries, including New Jersey Gov. Phil Murphy and Lou Manzione, president of the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in New Jersey. A special message was also delivered by Jeanne Murphy, a retired U.S. Army colonel and Dr. Murphy's wife. Other inauguration speakers included the presidents of several New Jersey independent universities and community colleges and representatives of the Centenary University faculty, staff, administration, student body, and alumni association.

Rochelle Makela-Goodman, chair of the Centenary University Board of Trustees, presided over the inauguration. "Dr. Murphy has demonstrated outstanding leadership throughout his first year at Centenary University," said Makela-Goodman. "In addition to guiding the University through one of the most difficult eras in our history, he is moving forward with plans to enhance academic, research, and extracurricular opportunities that will strengthen Centenary University for generations to come."

Dr. Murphy assumed the presidency of Centenary University on Jan. 1, 2020, just weeks before COVID-19 halted in-person instruction on the nation's college campuses. A retired U.S. Army lieutenant colonel, he has provided steady leadership throughout the global health crisis. Top priorities for Dr. Murphy were ensuring that Centenary students not miss a day of instruction during the pandemic and the return of in-person classes for the fall semester. A new program called Centenary Choice now gives students the option of attending classes fully in-person, online, or in a HyFlex format combining the two. Thanks to stringent COVID-19 mitigation efforts, the University completed in-person instruction for the fall semester, as planned, on Nov. 24. During his education career, Dr. Murphy served as president of Nicholls State University in Louisiana. In addition, he taught leadership courses at West Point and was vice president for academic affairs at the U.S. Air Force's Air University in Alabama. He also held teaching posts at Vanderbilt University and Mercyhurst College, where he was the founding director of the Master of Science in organizational leadership program and chair of the Walker School of Business. In addition, he was the founding dean of the School of Business and professor of management at Point Park University. Dr. Murphy earned a doctorate in educational leadership from Vanderbilt University, master's degrees from Teachers College at Columbia University and the University of Southern California, and a bachelor's degree from the University of California at Berkeley.

To honor Dr. Murphy and to mark his inauguration, the University has also updated the President's Initiative Fund with new priorities as outlined by Dr. Murphy. The Fund will help support Instructional Technology - impacting how our students learn, Classroom Upgrades - offering state of the art environments where our students learn, and Student Scholarships - providing access to education for those who need it most. As a professor at Centenary himself, Dr. Murphy has outlined these initiatives as areas, he feels, will most positively impact students' opportunity and success.

CENTENARY UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES — HELPING TO ENSURE A SAFE RETURN TO CAMPUS

By Theresa A. Lord-Stout, RN, MSN, APN-C, Executive Director of Wellness

Although the Winter Break provides Centenary students with much needed rest, relaxation and reunions with family and friends at home, it also provides an opportunity for students to have new exposures to COVID-19, and the potential to bring the virus back to campus and expose others. In an effort to mitigate that risk, Centenary University Health Services, in conjunction with the Student Life Department, initiated a mandatory COVID-19 testing protocol for all residential students prior to their moving back into their residence halls.

This arduous testing initiative began in mid-January and continued throughout the month. Return to campus was staggered, and all students were asked to make an appointment on the day they wished to return to campus. Any student who traveled from areas outside of New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut or Delaware were required to complete a fourteen-day quarantine prior to returning to campus. On the day of their return all students were first administered a screening questionnaire to identify potential symptoms and risk factors for COVID-19. This was followed by a temperature check and a rapid antigen screening COVID test which yields results in 15 minutes. As per the CDC and guidelines set forth by the Health Department, those students who indicated that they had previously tested positive in the past 90 days were required to bring copies of their test results, and were not re-tested.

Any student who tested positive on the rapid screening test was also administered a second confirmatory PCR test. There were no out-of-pocket costs associated with this testing initiative for the students, as all expenses were covered by the Student Wellness Fee.

At the time of the writing of this article, close to 400 students were screened and tested. Many thanks to the members of the Student Life Staff, the Centenary Athletic Trainers, and Dr. Craig Fuller, Medical Laboratory Technologist who assisted Health Services Staff with this initiative. Thus far, two students were identified as COVID-19 positive, and are presently isolating for the recommended time before being cleared to return to campus. Students are given the option to isolate off campus, or in designated isolation housing on campus. Students who isolate on campus are provided with personal linens and have meals delivered by campus dining services. Staff from Health Services and Student Life monitor the students during their isolation.

We are confident that our testing initiatives along with our policies enforcing social distancing, the wearing of face masks, our symptom monitoring app (CAMPUS CLEAR), hand washing, and cleaning and disinfecting efforts have all played critical roles in keeping our students and our campus community safe. Throughout the upcoming Spring semester diagnostic and screening testing will continue to be offered to all undergraduate students. A new COVID-19 testing center will be established in the previous bookstore space. Any student requesting testing is advised to call the Wellness Center at 908-852-1400 extension 2209 for an appointment.

Residence Life Update

Hello Families,

The Spring semester has begun and a snow has fallen covering campus.

We opened the residence halls after Covid-19 screening all residential students before they were cleared to re-enter the residence halls to ensure our community was safe to begin the Spring semester. Happy to report as we conclude our first quarter of the semester that the majority of our residents are safe and COVID-19 free. There was a spike of positive cases at the start of this semester but we have proactively taken measures including quarantining students and contact tracing to limit the amount of exposure to these positive cases. In order to track and assist any positive students, please remind your student that if they get tested off campus, they should share the result with the Health Services office. For anyone that would like to have more information about the Universities response to Covid-19, there is a website with resources. On that page is a dashboard that tracks positive cases, quarantine cases, and the number of tests that have been completed since January 1st. We continue to ask our residents to abide by the social distancing policy for a second semester. We understand that this is tough and not our usual residence hall experience but it is vital to your student's safety as well as that of our community that we all do our part in complying with these new COVID-19 rules.

While we continue our efforts in providing a safe residential experience for your student amidst this pandemic, the Residence Life staff has events and initiatives for our Spring semester that I am excited to share including:

- The Resident Assistant selection process for the 21-22 academic year. Applications are available and will be due on Friday, February 19th. The selection process will include an interview with Residence Life staff and a group process day of events. Students will be notified if they have been hired by the middle of March so apartment applications are not affected. Students that are selected to be an RA will receive a scholarship that covers their single room and their meal plan.
- The Returner Room Selection process will occur in April. Students will need to submit a $200 housing deposit and be registered for Fall 2021 classes to take part in the selection process. There will be a selection process for the apartments, single rooms, and double rooms. For students to be eligible to take part in the apartment selection process, they must have a 2.3 or greater GPA at the end of the Fall 2020 semester and have the correct group size or apply for a single. For transfer student, we will work with Admissions to see what was transferred in. More information will be e-mailed out in the near future.
  - o If your student is currently living home but is thinking about returning to housing for the Fall 2021 semester, we would love to have them back and strongly encourage that they participate in our room selection process.
- The Residence Life staff has programs planned for the semester for our residents to have fun and make great memories- safely. Please encourage your child to come out to the programs or contact their RA if they want more information.
- The Spring semester, as planned right now, will end on Friday, May 1st at 6:00 pm. Students will have 24 hours after their last final or 6:00 pm on May 1st to check out. Seniors and those assisting with senior week festivities will be allowed to stay until Graduation. Residence halls will close at 6:00 pm following graduation.

If you have any questions related to how we can make your student's home away from home more enjoyable, please do not hesitate to contact residencelife@centenaryuniversity.edu.

I wish you all a healthy and safe Spring.

Sincerely,

Matthew Lavery
Director of ResidenceLife & Community Standards

How Much Sugar is in that M&M?

Centenary University chemistry students work under direction of R&D team from Mars Wrigley US to determine sugar content of iconic candy

Every day, people around the world consume millions of M&M candies. With the confections manufactured daily in a nearby Hackettstown facility, Centenary University chemistry students set out to answer a question about the iconic candy: How much sugar is in a single M&M?

That basic question holds important business implications for sugar procurement by Mars Wrigley US, which has its corporate headquarters in Hackettstown and Newark. M&Ms are a true Jersey treat: The first M&Ms were manufactured in Newark in 1941.

Earlier this year, Centenary and Mars Wrigley US began exploring ways the neighboring entities could form an educational partnership. The firm's research and development team proposed this fall's project with nine Centenary seniors enrolled in an Analytical Chemistry class taught by Ahmet Kukrek, Ph.D., assistant professor of chemistry. The goal: To demonstrate how scientific research provides practical solutions for global companies.

"It was a very collaborative process between Mars Wrigley and Centenary University students. Their scientists didn't want to give our students a meaningless project—this is something that's important to their internal team," said Dr. Kukrek. "The R&D team wanted students to be as creative as possible in their research approach, so they didn't share much about what they were working on in their own labs." Under the direction of Dr. Kukrek and Mars Wrigley scientists, students were tasked with searching existing literature and developing research methods to analyze the sugar content of a single M&M. As their research progressed, the students met virtually every two weeks with the R&D professionals, who offered guidance on research methods and preliminary results. At the end of the fall semester, the student teams presented their findings to representatives from Mars Wrigley US.

Dr. Kukrek said the approach mirrored methods used in leading graduate research projects. "This was just like a graduate school research project," he explained. "Centenary students were given a real problem that a real company is facing and were charged with finding a solution."

"Involving Centenary University in Mars R&D work was a great way to examine the project from a different perspective and to obtain innovative ideas," said Eyal Ben-Yoseph, Ph.D., technology fellow with Mars Wrigley USA. "This project gave the students an opportunity to work on a real-life problem. They did an excellent job and provided a solution that benefited Mars. This was also an opportunity for Mars to give back to the community. Centenary University is located less than a mile from our Hackettstown production facility, and this was the first collaborative project with the science department. Based on our experience, we are looking forward to more collaboration opportunities in the future."

While they were discovering the answer to the problem, students also gained hands-on lab experience, at a time when many college labs were closed due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Dr. Kukrek added, "All of this research was happening while most of the big universities were closed and undergraduates weren't allowed in labs. This was a great way for Centenary and Mars Wrigley to collaborate, especially during these difficult times."

Krassi Lazarova, Ph.D., chair of the Centenary University Science Department, said she looks forward to partnering with Mars Wrigley US on additional projects. "This initiative was a testament to an industry collaboration done right," Dr. Lazarova noted. "It provided an important learning curve for our students, who rose up to expectations and impressed the R&D team at Mars Wrigley. This will set a strong foundation for more industry-commissioned projects in the future and a closer relationship between Centenary University and Mars Wrigley."

CSAC Board of Directors Announces Intent to Move Forward With Spring Sports

The Board of Directors of the Colonial States Athletic Conference (CSAC) affirmed their intent to move forward with a formal competitive season and conference championships for all spring sports in the spring 2021 semester; and to give member institutions the autonomy to engage in non-conference competition in the sports of baseball, men's golf, men's and women's lacrosse, softball, women's tennis, men's & women's outdoor track & field and men's volleyball at their discretion with the condition that the expectations outlined in the CSAC Return to Play plan are reviewed and met by the opponent.

CSAC institutions are committed to following pandemic related metrics, all local, state, and federal health guidelines as well as NCAA recommendations related to athletic activity.

"This is great news for Centenary's student-athletes," said Centenary University Director of Athletics Travis Spencer. "Throughout the pandemic, our Cyclones have continued to train with diligence and integrity to remain competition-ready, while adhering to stringent safety guidelines to control the spread of COVID-19. We look forward to resuming intercollegiate play this spring."

Centenary President Bruce Murphy, Ed.D., added that the University remains steadfast in its commitment to student safety, while continuing to offer in-person opportunities for students to attend classes and participate in independent research, internships, and extracurricular activities, including athletics. "With this announcement from the CSAC, our Cyclones are excited to return to the playing field," Dr. Murphy said. "Centenary University will continue to work with the CSAC—as well as county, state, and national health officials—to maintain the highest coronavirus safety standards in our classrooms, on our campus, and on our playing fields."

The CSAC Board of Directors, athletic administrators and conference office staff shall continue to actively monitor the changing conditions of the COVID-19 pandemic throughout the semester and shall make adjustments as necessary to adhere to local, state and federal health requirements and maintain the health and well-being of our student athletes.

Campus Ministry Newsletter

The Campus Ministry at the University continues to offer programming and support for the entire community as we experience college life during a pandemic. The Campus Ministry continues to provide a food pantry open to the entire campus. Students are engaged in collecting food and stocking the pantry as part of service learning projects and community service connected to Greek Life. Ministry experiences include weekly Bible studies, a radio program focused on spirituality and support and engagement important to the entire University. For example, a meditation group will begin to provide stress reduction strategies to assist in preparing for the challenges of university life. For more information, or additional support, please contact the University Chaplain via email: timothy.nicinski@centenaryuniversity.edu

Centenary University to distribute additional $784,500 in federal COVID-19 relief funding to students affected by pandemic

Centenary University is preparing to distribute a new round of financial assistance to students through the federal Coronavirus Response and Relief Supplemental Appropriations Act (CRRSAA), which was signed into law in December.

The act provides economic relief to American workers, families, and businesses who, through no fault of their own, have been adversely impacted by the pandemic. The new funding builds on the federal Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act adopted last spring.

The CRRSAA awarded nearly $2.2 million in additional funding to Centenary University to provide institutional aid and assistance to individual students. Of that amount, the University will distribute more than $675,262 to students demonstrating exceptional financial need. In addition, Centenary will roll over $109,000 in funds reserved from the CARES Act, bringing pending federal student aid to more than $784,500. The University is finalizing the process for CRRSAA student aid applications, which will be announced directly to students and their families.

The new funding issued through the CRRSAA extends eligible expenses to include unpaid college cost of attendance balances, a factor that has been identified as critical nationally to keeping students in college. Denton Stargel, vice president for business and finance at Centenary, noted, "Parents and students have lost jobs, and money for many families is tight. The central purpose of this funding is to keep students in school, at a time when some think their only option is to sit out a semester. This is an important way we can ease their burden and ensure they stay on track to earn a Centenary University degree."

The good news about additional federal aid came as University President Bruce Murphy, Ed.D., presented Presidential Challenge Coins to members of the Centenary CARES Task Force for their outstanding commitment in distributing more than $565,635 in coronavirus relief funding to qualified students for the spring and fall 2020 semesters. "I couldn't be happier with what you have done," said Dr. Murphy. "I know it's been hard work, intellectually and emotionally, to process and determine these awards that are so critical to our students. And once a Centenary student applies for assistance, that process has generally happened within a week."

A letter from the Office of Survivor Support + Violence Prevention

Hello Cyclone Families!

It is a pleasure to greet you from the Office of Survivor Support and Violence Prevention (SSVP) and be able to share some of the things that our office is doing to keep your cyclone safe. SSVP is a grant-funded project by the Department of Justice's Office of Violence Against Women; after receiving a grant to fund the project, SSVP came to life and furthered the University's commitment to addressing gender-based and interpersonal violence, sexual assault and harassment, and stalking.

Prior to the arrival of the grant, for years, Centenary was at the forefront of incredibly important conversations regarding violence, by engaging all students in Bystander Intervention and Sexual Assault Prevention workshops during Orientation, hosting annual events such as "Walk a Mile in Her Shoes" and "Take Back the Night" and so much more. Upon the arrival of the grant, the SSVP Office was created and allowed the dedication of a full-time staff member (that's me!) who would continue to spearhead the efforts and develop culturally competent and contemporary programming that is designed to engage all members of the community. Housed in our Student Life Suite, SSVP has become a key-part of the University's commitment to safety, education, and violence prevention across our campus.

Here, in SSVP we are dedicated to creating a holistic and collaborative approach to addressing violence in all forms on our campus. By engaging students, faculty and staff in conversations and trainings, Centenary is actively demonstrating a commitment to re-shaping the culture of gender-based violence and sexual assault and making great strides to eradicating violence from our campus fully. Throughout the course of this year, SSVP will be engaging in dynamic projects, from training Resident Advisors and First Year Leaders on intervention techniques, to hosting workshops discussing Gender, Sex, Sexuality, Power Dynamics, Interventions and much more for students and faculty alike, coordinating events and programming and raising awareness through social media campaigns.

After many years in higher education, one conversation with a parent will always stick out to me; at an Open House, a parent was concerned about their child's safety - and wanted the reassurance that we would do whatever we could to keep their child safe. My response was critical but simple: at Centenary, we pride in being a supportive community, where every member of the Cyclone family is dedicated to keeping their fellow cyclones safe.

I, as well as my colleagues, have consistently held close to this commitment, particularly in the work conducted by the SSVP Office. Our multi-faceted approach of including everyone in these conversations might seem complex - yet the commitment from every member of our community is how we continue to facilitate a culture of safety and equity. As a current employee, an adjunct faculty member and proud alumni of the University, I am grateful to say that Centenary's dedication to ensuring not only the safety, but the success of all its students, is just one of the things that truly sets Centenary University apart.

Sincerely,

Lily Passaretti, MSW (she/her)
 Program Coordinator, OVW Grant

Wrestling Ranked in NWCA Standings

The Centenary University wrestling team was well represented as the National Wrestling Coaches Association (NWCA) released its latest rankings on Thursday, Jan. 21.

A pair of Cyclones were ranked in their individual weight classes. Sophomore Ryan Anderson was slotted No. 1 at 149 pounds while senior Kenny Long checked in at eighth at 184 pounds.

As a team, the Cyclones found themselves tied for No. 13 with the College of New Jersey as both schools received 19 points. The top spot in the poll belonged to Wabash while Wartburg, John Carroll and Coast Guard all tied for second.

"It's humbling that the ranking committee acknowledges our guys' hard work and how good we can be," said head coach John Garriques.

Anderson had a hugely successful freshman campaign for the Cyclones. He became the second wrestler in program history and first since Chris Burdge (2011) to be named the D3wrestle.com Freshman of the Year. Anderson was also named a First Team All-American by the NWCA Coaches Group.

Anderson won the 149-pound bracket at the NCAA Mideast Regional Championship and would have been the number one seed in his weight class at the NCAA National Championship. Anderson finished his freshman season with a 30-3 mark. His 30 wins are tied for sixth on the single season wins list at Centenary.

Anderson had 15 wins by fall last year, which ranks tied for fourth in single-season history at Centenary. That is also tied for 16th on the career falls list at Centenary. He did not lose to a Division III opponent all year and did not lose a bout after Nov. 10 at the East Stroudsburg Open.

Long excelled in his first season with the Cyclones as he posted a 20-9 mark while finishing fourth at the NCAA Mideast Regional. He was also named an National Wrestling Coaches Association (NWCA) Scholar All-American.

Long led the Cyclones with seven major decision wins and added three wins by fall.

He finished third at the Doug Parker Invitational hosted by Springfield and the Bob Quade Cyclone Open. Long's win by fall against No. 6 TCNJ gave the Cyclones a brief lead in a tightly contested contest.

Diversity, Inclusion and Belonging Update

As Centenary University remains committed to creating an environment open to diversity, equity and fostering a sense of belonging.

The office of Diversity and Inclusion is currently developing:

- A university wide policy on DIB to support and provide guidelines specific to the needs of our entire community
- Preparing a Campus Climate Survey (April 2021) to gather data to support future campus diversity initiatives.
- Currently developing Web and Social Media outlets to recognize and celebrate campus initiatives in the areas of culture and awareness
- Actively seeking grant opportunities for future campus projects and cultural initiatives

We are better as a community, especially one where we all belong...

ESL Conversation Zoom: (Virtual Conversation Hour) SPRING 2021

All levels are welcome. Free! Come join Kim in an hour of ESL. These zoom sessions will focus on conversation and talking.

There will be a survey given upon registration. This will be to ask for your level of English proficiency and to see what areas you would like us to focus the sessions on. We are happy to assist, support, and guide you through your English language learning journey. Kim has her Masters Degree in English As a Second Language from New Jersey City University; she is excited to be able to offer this to our community members.

Please register for each session in advance. We look forward to seeing you on Zoom!
